

Nature reserve Krasniy Bor

Wolf in the grass

The Krasniy Bor nature reserve is located in the far north, on the border with Russia and Latvia. Dmitrij and his family live on its edge, in the deepest wilderness. Dmitrij is a passionate biologist and nature lover who knows the nature of the north like no other. He can tell you many interesting stories about the forest and its inhabitants. Dmitrij will also introduce you to his grey friends, three wolves he raised as puppies. He understands how to live in a pack of wolves, for the wolves he is the alpha animal. As the house is situated in the middle of the forest, Dmitrij often gets animals visits. There are moose or wild boars to be seen, in the river next to the house lives a beaver family, which can sometimes be seen on the shore.

Wolf jumping at the lake

The north of Belarus is known for its extensive lake areas and some picturesque forest lakes. Walking through the original forest is fun and helps to relax. Depending on the season, you can also pick berries and mushrooms.

Dmitrij invites you to be his guest for a day or two. You will stay with him in a comfortable wooden house. Dmitrij's wife Evgeniya, an excellent cook, takes care of your physical well-being.
